Israeli settlements halted for summit

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet, fearing damage to next month's Middle East peace talks at Camp David, shelved a plan Monday to build five new Jewish outposts in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River at least until after the summer.

The Cabinet planned the new Jordan Valley settlements in a meeting June 28, but by sitting as the Ministerial Defense Committee it clamped a lid of secrecy and military censorship on its decision.

After weeks of rumors, Israeli state radio on Sunday reported that such a decision had been taken, and a government spokesman confirmed it Sunday night. Sixteen hours after the confirmation, Cabinet Secretary Arieh Noor announced the suspension of the plans.

"The government decided to discuss the matter after the Camp David meeting," Noor told reporters after the Cabinet met in Jerusalem.

President Carter, trying to rekindle flickering peace hopes, has invited Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to a summit at his retreat in Camp David, Md., Sept. 5.

Israeli ministers indicated the government could again change its mind, depending on the outcome of the summit. But the swift cabinet shift — coming before either Washington or Cairo had a chance to react officially — indicated Israel's sensitivity to its widely criticized policy of settling Jews in land captured from the Arabs in the 1967 Middle East War.

Washington sees Israel's more than 100 civilian and military enclaves in the West Bank, the Golan Strip, Sinai and the Golan Heights as obstacles to peace. Egypt demands they be dismantled. The addition of five more settlements could have undermined the Camp David talks even before they began.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told reporters Monday that Washington had been in touch with Jerusalem on the settlement's question. But he refused to comment on the events of the past two days. Other officials said privately that a public restatement of the U.S. attitude could lead to inflammatory headlines and needlessly strain U.S. relations with Israel.

In Cairo, too, officials declined comment and the press, sharply critical in the past, was virtually silent.

Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin, who led the cabinet meeting in the absence of the vacationing Begin, said that on June 28 he "blocked" the original decision by asking that it be taken up again by the cabinet.

"This was before even Yigael knew of Camp David," Yadin said in a state radio interview. He said his Democratic Movement for Change Party, minority member of Begin's right-wing coalition, favors a buildup of Israeli positions in the Jordan Valley. But, said Yadin, "We don't have to do that, exactly while the negotiations take place," his objection was against the timing.

Carter to get gov't out of farm business

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — President Jimmy Carter, in an upbeat but tough speech Monday to a major farmers organization, blamed what he called "special economic interest lobbies" for making the fight against inflation nearly impossible to win.

At the same time, the president told the Mid-America Farmers Association that he wanted to do everything possible "to get the government out of the farm business."

Carter took advantage of rising farm prices and a relaxation of the discontent that spread over American farms last winter to present in his first presidential address on farm policy a glowing report on farming, with little reference to consumer prices.

However, he won applause when he said "I will not permit unrestricted beef imports next year." Increased imports could lower the prices consumers pay for meat as well as the prices paid to farmers for livestock.

Carter told the approximately 10,000 persons gathered at the Hearn multi-purpose building, a modern auditorium on the University of Missouri campus here, that he would protect the Capper-

Volstead Act, a 1922 law giving farmer cooperatives exemption from federal antitrust laws. The act has drawn criticism from the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice that it allows monopolies in dairy and fruit farming and other agricultural endeavors.

Combining his report on farming, which was interrupted more than a dozen times by applause, with his attack on the special interest lobbies, Carter said:

"These lobbies care absolutely nothing about the national interest — as long as they get their. We will never win the fight against inflation unless we help the Congress resist those pressures."

The president told his audience, most of whom were dressed casually in shirtsleeves, that "the person most competent to make a farmer's decisions is not a bureaucrat in Washington or anywhere else; it is the man or woman on the farm."

"I want to go as far as I possibly can to get the government out of the farm business," he said.

With dairy, soybean, wheat and corn prices up — farmers income may increase 25 percent this year over last year — Carter's advisers felt the timing was right for the trip.

Solid wastes rapidly collect at the Provo landfill while commissioners decide on the best course of action for future collection. Alternatives include burning the garbage to generate electricity.

Provo landfill

Solid wastes mounting too high

By JON WHITE
Universe Staff Writer

Provo residents who put their trash out every week expecting it to be gone by the morning may be in for a surprise in the near future.

Provo's landfill is almost full, and that situation presents some special problems for the city.

Mayor James Ferguson estimates that the landfill will be full within the next year. Although there are many areas that could be used for a new landfill, many problems stand in the way of a move.

Commissioner Anagene Meecham says that the problems are mainly financial. "There are many places we could fill, including 60 acres in northeast Provo, but political problems prevent initiating any action," she explained. "We can't burn the trash because of air pollution, and we don't want to pollute the water in that area either."

Mrs. Meecham said the city is probably going to go up another lift on the present landfill in order to provide time to work out an alternative solution to the problem.

Going up another lift means piling the garbage six to eight feet above the ground. "It is in effect, create a six- or eight-foot mound covering the present landfill," she explained.

"We have Environmental Protection Agency technicians help plan the details," Mrs. Meecham said. She added that the area would probably be landscaped and used as a recreational park after the extra lift is fully built.

Mrs. Meecham said the extra lift will give the city about three or four years to find alternative ways of disposing of the city's garbage.

Many suggestions have already been entertained as possible ways to solve the problem.

Garbage-powered generation of electricity is one of the possible solutions cited by Mrs. Meecham. This suggestion would involve burning the city's solid waste as a method of generating electricity for Provo.

Officials of the Provo sanitation department have been asked to commission a study of the costs and implementation of such a program.

Mrs. Meecham said another possible solution to the waste problem is hauling of solid waste in order to transport it to other landfills.

This program would involve use of a high-pressure compactor that would process the waste into bales that could be transported on large flat-bed trucks. "The cost of such a program would be at least $500,000," Mrs. Meecham added.

She said the most probable of the solutions would be to have Provo join the Utah County Solid Waste Special Service District.

"The district includes all of the Wasatch Front communities in Utah County except Provo, Santaquin and Payson," Mrs. Meecham said. "The cities in the district have formed a group to deal with disposal of waste, collectively."

She said Provo is not a member of the group yet because the city has its own landfill for the time being. However, she said as soon as the district works out some of its financial problems, Provo will probably join.

"Money is our biggest problem," Mrs. Meecham said. "We have to decide which way is the best, most cost-effective way to go."

"We are a very wasteful nation, and waste removal is a serious problem throughout the U.S.," she added. "I just hope we can come up with a really good answer to the problem before it is too late."

County asks legal advice to expedite yard cleaning

By ALLISON BARNEY
Universe Staff Writer

Progress has gone from little to nothing in the last two months on the yard cleanup project. As a result, Highland County commissioners are now considering taking legal action to expedite the cleanup.

In June 26, Gerald Bringham, director of Parks and Recreation, was authorized to work with Fred Lyman, Highland junk collector, on a plan to clean up his property.

Bringham met with the commissioners Wednesday to discuss what progress had been made and what action should be taken. He said Buhler had not begun to work on a schedule. Buhler says he intends to clean up his property, but has been busy with other things and hasn't had time to get a schedule.

As long as it's (the junk) there, it'll never go away, and he'll continue to put it there, Commission Chairman Lyman said.

"I hate to force a cleanup," Bringham said. The last time they had a cleanup, Buhler got "violent," and Bringham feels that Buhler is capable of extreme violence.

Bringham drafted a letter to Buhler

Aug. 2, informing him that he would have to take action or the county would move in and clean up the property. The letter was not sent because County Attorney Guy Bringham felt it was not appropriate.

His advice was to have Buhler make an inventory of his things. After that was completed, the county would tell Buhler what he could and could not keep. Then a court order would be issued saying how long he had to remove the "garbage." If it was not removed, he would be held in contempt of court, which is punishable by imprisonment, said Bringham.

The courts have said that they would not restrain the county in its efforts. However, the commissioners feel that it is not permission to go ahead. Lyman said, "We need to find out the ABCs and do them. We have to be 100 percent sure of our legal rights."

Everything must be absolutely legal," Commissioner Kenneth Pinegar expressed his displeasure with the drawn-out affair. "We're the laughing stock of the county. People are saying we'll never enforce the ordinance. I think we should get the equipment and the men and go in and clean it up. Buhler is hurting the whole town. We're not trying to hurt him. The other commissioners nodded in agreement.

Senior cardinals to be excluded from election of 263rd pope; bishops gathering for conclave

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Members of the Sacred College of Cardinals over 80, banned from papal election in one of Pope Paul VI's most controversial decisions, will be in the electoral conclave to know the name of the next pope, a Vatican spokesman said Monday.

Younger cardinals made the decision out of respect for their older colleagues, said the official, who declined to be identified.

That as soon as the 263rd pope is elected and accepts the office, the new pope will leave the secret conclave in the Sistine Chapel and carry out his duties as pope.

Then the public will be told. Elderly cardinals already have been named because they were left out of the week's first daily meeting of the Sacred College of Cardinals, which runs the Roman Catholic Church in the interim between popes. A Vatican spokesman said their exclusion from the meeting was a misunderstanding and it has not happened again. Ninety-four cardinals, including those above 80, attended Monday's session of the congregation, which also is making preparations for the conclave opening Aug. 25.

A statement said the Vatican received formal notification from two cardinals that had heads will prevent them from attending the conclave. They are John Wright, the Vatican's American currently in a Boston hospital, and Boleslaw Filipiak of Poland, also hospitalized. Wright wrote he was to undergo an eye operation and doctors advised him against traveling to Rome.

A third cardinal, Valeriano Gracias, archbishop of Bombay, India, is sick and cannot come, the Vatican said last week.

That leaves 112 cardinals for the conclave. But a few have yet to arrive, including Joseph Marie Trinh Van Can, archbishop of Hanoi. A Vietnamese priest said the Vatican has not heard from him in some time.

Provo City, BYU work out water share; agreement to allow campus expansion

After 15 years of trying, BYU and Provo City have reached an agreement on use of the Holman water well and ownership of Rock Canyon water shares.

Paul Rasmussen, BYU construction engineer, and Merrill L. Bingham, Provo water and wastewater director, presented the agreement to the city commission Tuesday evening.

The agreement allows Provo City to take over operation of the Holman Halls well (leaving ownership to BYU) and assume ownership of 48.5 shares of Rock Canyon water stock previously owned by BYU. In return, Provo will supply BYU with water equaling one-half of what the Rock Canyon shares would produce (4,947,000 cubic feet per year).

"This agreement will permit the university to expand and grow and not be strangled by the lack of water," Bingham said. However, he also assured the commissioners the agreement would not cause any hardships upon the city water system.

"Utilization of this water will help alleviate demands on the system during the heaviest usage periods," Bingham said. He pointed out that the agreement will add 2,245 gallons of water per minute to the city water system during peak water usage hours.

Congratulating Bingham and Rasmussen, Mayor James Ferguson said, "This will be beneficial to BYU and Provo, perhaps forever."

Bingham told the commissioners hundreds of hours had been spent on the agreement. He felt, however, that the time was well worth the improvement the agreement will make in Provo's water system.

Arson suspected in $60,000 building loss

Arson is suspected in a Provo apartment complex fire which did $58,000 damage Saturday.

Two under-construction buildings, part of the Johnson apartments at 980 W. 300 South, burned to the ground about 2 a.m. Saturday shortly after Richard and Robert Johnson, contractors and owners of the apartments, heard two men make threats to burn them. Police have not yet located the suspects to question them.

Johnson said he thought the fire was started by gasoline poured within the west building. Once lit, the fire spread to the east building. "Even if the police do catch the suspects, it's very difficult to get a conviction on arson," he said. "You have to see them light the match."

The buildings, which were 40 percent completed, with six weeks to go, will now take three to four months to finish. "It will take us about a week and a half to two weeks just to clean up the mess, and then another six weeks to bring it back up to where we are now," Johnson said.

Johnson explained that the amount of loss will depend on whether or not the concrete can be salvaged. Insurance covers all but time and profit loss.

Asked if the fire had changed his attitude about building and renting apartments, Johnson replied, "It doesn't get me down, we'll just build more."

Police suspect arsonists were the cause of an apartment complex fire at 980 W. 300 South, Provo. Owners of the buildings will delve through the remains for salvageable materials to use in rebuilding.

Earthquake hits Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — While aftershocks continued Monday, scientists tried to pinpoint the geological fault responsible for the earthquake that injured about 60 persons in this coastal city and caused at least $500,000 damage.

Dr. Michael Reiche said several faults in the Santa Barbara Channel, where the quake was centered Sunday, have been identified. The one probably responsible for the quake is known as the Pitas Point fault, he said.

Many of those injured during Sunday's 30-second jolt were cut by flying glass and tumbling dishes, police said. Of those who remained at Goleta Valley Community Hospital on Monday, one was suffering from burns, one had a heart attack, another, a dislocated neck and the fourth a fractured back.

Onassis Kauzov returns home

MOSCOW (AP) — Greek millionairess Christina Onassis Kauzov surprised her new Russian husband and mother-in-law Monday by returning abruptly to Moscow, nine days after she just as abruptly left behind her husband for a visit to Athens and London.

Kauzov did not meet his wife at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport, but Mrs. Kauzov dismissed reporters that her 14-day-old marriage was on the rocks.

"I've been away on a business trip and I shall be making other business trips around the world in the future," she said in a statement to reporters after her arrival.

3 balloonists third of way

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The Double Eagle II glided along at 15,000 feet Monday with three adventurers, enduring temperatures near freezing, one-third of their way to becoming the first to cross the Atlantic in a balloon.

The balloon, which lifted off from Presque Isle, Maine, on Friday night, was pinpointed 495 miles northeast of St. Johns, Newfoundland.

If the aviators reach Brest, France on Thursday, as they hope, the journey will be the first trans-Atlantic crossing in a balloon.

Nyad battles rough water

ORTEGAJO, Cuba — Marathon swimmer Diana Nyad was more than 10 miles behind schedule in turbulent water Monday and her adviser said he was "gravely concerned" she may not complete her 103-mile swim from Cuba to Florida.

Ms. Nyad was trying to establish a record for the longest distance ever swum in open water.

"She's facing pretty rough water and she's about 10 miles, maybe a little bit more than that, behind schedule," Ken Gunderson, the adviser said.

Bundy pleads innocent

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — Theodore Bundy, composed but pale, pleaded innocent Monday to charges of kidnapping and killing 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach.

"Because I'm innocent, I will plead not guilty," 31-year-old Bundy told Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling at the 10-minute arraignment.

Jopling allowed controversial defense attorney Millard Farmer of Atlanta to represent Bundy at the arraignment, but the judge said he would rule later whether to allow Farmer to represent Bundy at the trial.

Plane crash victims found

Utah County authorities say R. C. Johnson of Las Vegas, Nev., died at the controls of his twin-engine private airplane Sunday and five passengers were killed as the aircraft went down in a storm.

Rescue searches from the Utah County Sheriff's Patrol and the Civil Air Patrol found the bodies of six people in the wreckage of a twin engine Beechcraft plane which crashed west of Lehi during stormy weather late Sunday night.

The dead were, in addition to Johnson, Brad Lewis, Steve and Susan Straub, Johnson's daughter and son-in-law; and Jerry and Ronda Griffith, friends of the Straubs. All were from Las Vegas.

According to the Utah County Sheriff's Office, the plane broke apart on impact and it took searchers quite awhile before all the bodies were located.

Bill Lovett, the in-route control center manager for the Federal Aviation Administration, said Johnson was flying an instrument flight plan and was under control of the flight tower at the time of the crash.

He also said Johnson had an instrument rating and had radioed for weather information shortly before the crash. Severe thunderstorms had been reported in the area, but Lovett said "everything seemed to be under control."

Federal intervention results in confusion

By LIZ ROBISON
Universe Staff Writer

The D.C. in Washington, D.C., stands for Distressing and Confusing, according to a former assistant to the U.S. Attorney general and chief of the Civil Rights Division.

J. Stanley Pottinger gave the keynote address of the First National Conference on Law and Education in the J. Reuben Clark Law School last Thursday. He spoke on government regulation of education.

"Control of public education policy and financing has historically been a function of the state and local communities," he said. "But increasingly the federal government is playing a role of greater significance in the area of finance, by providing monies for programs deemed worthy of federal support."

According to Pottinger, problems arise because nothing draws federal funds better than the honey of turmoil.

Title IX

"The government regulation we are now experiencing is a late reaction to larger political forces such as Title IX," he said. Title IX is part of a federal act that forces schools receiving federal money to desegregate their educational institutions.

The government intrusion into the world of academics is resented especially by the elementary and secondary educational systems which rely on less sophisticated forms of reaction, he added.

"In the '60s, liberals said 'We need government regulation in our educational systems' and the conservatives said 'No we don't, because a little regulation will lead to more.' The conservatives were right, but we must adjust because regulation is here to stay," Pottinger said.

Must understand rules

It is a fact we must live with that regulation involves every aspect of our society, including education, which ironically enough promotes free thinking, he said. The major mission of educators is to try to understand the regulation and keep it honest.

"When Nixon was in office, he was inhospitable to even the idea of civil rights, except when he saw it as a political opportunity he could exploit," Pottinger said. "But now we have Carter who I believe is honestly committed to human rights."

Even though busing is a great problem, it is not still being politically exploited because the pot cannot boil forever, he said.

Congress worst offender

Congress is the worst offender of the goals of the academic world, according to Pottinger. He said the Age and Retirement Law in appearance seems good, but is only raising the bulge of the working force, in turn means someone has to be left out.

"I believe Congress did not think through the impact such a decision will have on those moving into employment," Pottinger said.

"It was not thought through because it is at odds with Affirmative Action. They are literally kicking white males out of the working force and replacing them with women and blacks."

Education must now take its case before Congress, he said. Previously it was not a part of the legislative process, which includes costly lobbying and organizing.

Educators' responsibility

Pottinger said educators have the responsibility to do four things concerning the law. First, they must get involved and understand the legislation which affects them in any way. Second, they must stand up for their principles and be willing to litigate. Third, they must be informed of the goings-on and be engaged with organizations to influence the government. Fourth, they must stay ahead of the regulation and use common sense to keep themselves self-regulated.

Pottinger said he thinks government regulation has been for the better by enriching the material itself and providing equal opportunity for all.

"The government has tried for the common good and overall I would say that it has succeeded," he said.

LDS exhibit planned for County Fair

The LDS Church will place an exhibit at the Utah County Fair in Spanish Fork Aug. 16-19.

This year's display promises to be the best in years, according to Louis E. Crandall, fair exhibit chairman.

The exhibit is costing the church about $3,000 and is sponsored by the Utah Valley Area Communications Council, he added.

"The exhibit's theme is from a church directive which discusses the importance of personal and family preparedness standards," he said. The five-part exhibit, named "Preparedness Panorama," is the result of efforts coordinated by Crandall involving 48 LDS stakes.

The first part is "Brain Power 78," which will demonstrate basic literary and educational tools stressing the development of skills and wholesome habits in the family.

"Career development is important to this goal in which different vocations and professions are discussed and special aids are provided," he said.

The second part will be "Producing and Preserving," a display of home skills such as canning, freezing and drying foods. The production skills of sewing and gardening will be included.

"Managing Economic Resources 78," the third part of the exhibit, will encourage the goals of avoiding debt and using economic resources wisely, Crandall said.

The fourth part, "Breathing Easier 78," will promote physical health and fitness. Crandall said this portion will offer blood pressure tests and health pamphlets to the public.

Concluding the exhibit will be "Serving Through Friendship 78," which will expand on the LDS Church philosophy of service to God and man for the interest of everyone. This, according to Crandall, is designed to teach visitors the principles for happy and beneficial interaction with people.

About 43 stakes in the area will send people to man the exhibit. Missionaries will also be there to answer questions, he added.

"We hope our exhibit will be one which residents will be proud of and one which symbolizes the church's desire to encourage personal and family development," Crandall said.

Commissioners to hear appeals

By JON WHITE
Universe Staff Writer

At least six separate appeals are expected to be heard tonight when Provo City commissioners consider approval of a long list of Planning Commission recommendations.

Included on the agenda are a proposed moratorium on all building development west of I-15 in Provo, and annexation of 41 acres in the Carterville neighborhood known as the Jenkins Addition.

Planning commissioners approved the two controversial plans during commission meeting last week, and city commissioners are expected to give final approval in tonight's meeting.

Dave Gardner, spokesman for the Provo Planning Staff, said the proposed moratorium for West Provo, which involves the Sunset and Fort Utah neighborhoods, will stop all development and rezoning in the area for a maximum of six months, except on those developments that have already been given final approval.

Moratorium purpose

"The purpose of the moratorium is to give the planning staff time to survey the area, determine the problems and work on a master plan," Gardner explained.

He said the area had grown much faster than expected in the past few years and the existing master plan for the area was obsolete.

He said the moratorium could possibly be lifted in only three months if studies on the area are completed by then.

A number of Provo developers protested the moratorium and asked for exemption. However, many residents of the area praised the planning staff for initiating the moratorium.

Provo Community Development Director Jerry Howell told the commission that the moratorium will "benefit everyone, in the long run. We need to find solutions for these problems, collectively. We do not feel we are qualified to exclude any areas from the moratorium."

Commission approval

After the commission voted for approval of the moratorium, Commissioner Dennis Weir added, "It is not our purpose to stop all development west of the freeway, but to give the planning staff a chance to plan the area so development can be done in an orderly manner."

Six requests for rezoning and subdivision approval in the affected area were re-scheduled for tonight's city commission meeting on an appeal basis.

The Planning Commission also voted for preliminary approval of annexation of the Jenkins Addition.

The 41-acre plot, located in the Carterville neighborhood, was recently de-annexed from Orem because Orem City could not provide sewer service to the area.

Subdivisions

Two subdivision plans for the area were also given preliminary approval by the Planning Commission. Developers of the two subdivisions received loud applause from Carterville residents in the audience because both developments are for single family housing.

Most of the homes in the area are duplexes and triplexes and the Carterville homeowners feel the situation causes too much transience in the neighborhood. Carterville Neighborhood Chairman Lowell Dobson praised the developers for "adding to the solidarity and stability of the area by putting in single-family homes."

Other business

In other business, the Planning Commission recommended that the City Commission approve deletion of the third density section from the Provo hillside ordinance.

Neil Lindbergh of the planning staff said the section could be deleted without hurting the intent of the ordinance. "The other two density sections will take care of regulation of development if they are used with a site-development ordinance," Lindbergh explained.

Residents of the area presented a petition to the commission opposing the ordinance change, but commissioners felt the addition of an individual site-development ordinance would accomplish the same thing as the section in question.

New complex shortens wait

Long waiting lists for on-campus married student housing may soon be shortened.

The new married student complex being constructed behind Wymount Terrace should help reduce the wait, according to Delyle Barton, housing office director.

"Right now, depending on the type of accommodation required, the waiting lists are generally from 12 to 18 months," Barton said.

The contractor is hoping to have six of the 21 buildings, constituting 20 apartments, ready for use during Winter Semester, according to Mark Robertson, construction office building inspector.

The project, started last May, is scheduled for completion next July and will have 200 two-bedroom units, Robertson said.

The new complex, as yet unnamed, will have a laundry facility and a "special purpose building for social and church meetings, and the grounds will be landscaped with small play areas dispersed throughout," Robertson said.

"The buildings are all two-story with white brick on the outside and dark asphalt shingle roofs."

Individual apartments have about the same floor area as the two-bedroom units in Wymount, but will be all-electric and will have cable TV connections, he said.

Eight of the apartments are especially designed to accommodate the handicapped, providing a slightly different arrangement in the bathrooms and no steps. Further provisions include ramps leading from the parking lots to the housing units, Robertson said.

Church History department documents Lord's direction

By SUSAN POLSTER
Universe Staff Writer

"LDS Church documents further emphasize the Lord's direction from the beginning to the present," said Church Historian Leonard Arrington in a free-discussion format at ASBYU Academic Office's final lecture for Summer Term Thursday.

Arrington explained that the Church History Department was organized under President Joseph F. Smith in 1922. "The department has grown immensely since it was organized to supervise the church libraries, archives, arts and sites, research, writing, and publishing," he said.

"We have the second largest archive collections in the United States. There are over a million and a quarter periodicals and books. Only the federal government has one larger," Arrington said.

The church has 50,000 manuscripts of Brigham Young while he was president of the church from 1847 to 1877 as well as four of his diaries, 20 large letters copy books each containing 1,000 pages with 20,000 letters of outgoing correspondence, and 400 ledgers of his financial accounts, he said.

"My current assignment is to do a biography of Brigham Young," he said. "And with the amount of material that I have collected, it will take me at least four years to complete."

"All of the archives and documents are available to the public with the exception of individual tithing records, patriarchal blessings, minutes of church trials and minutes of presiding quorums not yet released," he said.

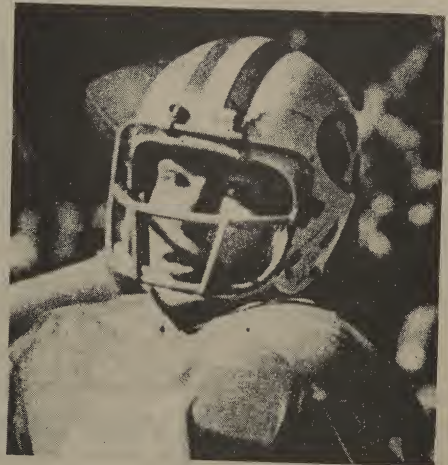

The Arts and Sites Division is headed by Florence Jacobson, a professional historical architect. Her current project includes planning a museum that will be built in Salt Lake City to exhibit church art and artifacts. The general authorities will announce later the place of construction and the date of completion, Arrington said.

"We think that once the museum is built, it will be one of the finest west of the Mississippi River," he said.

By KEVIN COLE
Universe Sports Editor

Attention, WAC football coaches: BYU's head football coach Lavell Edwards has revealed his "best kept secret."

The scene was the seventh annual Beehive Boot luncheon at Salt Lake City's Fort Douglas Country Club Thursday. Present were Utah's four major universities' football coaches decked out in coats and ties, the school's sports-information directors attired in casual dress, and a corps of media and sports writers, "the ones wearing blue jeans."

Worn comfortably by the Cougars for the past three years, the Beehive Boot is the symbol of gridiron supremacy among Utah's four major football teams. Utah State is a four-time winner, while Utah and Weber State never have lost the award.

After being introduced as the "winningest coach ever at BYU," Edwards revealed the secret while all were busily taking notes. "The key to our success has been our defense."

"Even though we broke offensive game records last year, we took the ball away 56 times for a new conference record," Edwards said. "And that goes for a lot of quick, easy touchdowns."

Although BYU is heavily favored to win its fourth straight Beehive Boot, the Cougars, having logged identical 9-2 conference-title seasons the past two years, will seek this year the WAC championship title and to represent the conference in the first Holiday Bowl, Dec. 22, in San Diego.

With five-six teams capable of winning the WAC title, Edwards predicted the conference race as "tight as a drum" as close as it ever has been. The conference champion will not go undefeated.

Sporting the best linebacking crew BYU has ever fielded, Edwards tidily summed up the 1978 Cougar defensive team as "very solid and excellent." The defensive crew features two-year starters Rod Wood and Larry Miller as linebackers and Mat Mendenhall — "great quickness and tenacity" — and Ross Varner as defensive ends.

And Edwards promised that the offensive game would be "very interesting again."

Having led the nation the last two years in passing yardage, BYU will again staff two sharpshooters in the quarterback spot. Marc Wilson — "speaks for self" — and backup Jim McMahon — "supreme confidence and the receiver corps excitement."

Conference split end Mike Chromster will include All-Conference eligibility requirements, "and tight end Todd Thompson, a three-year starter. Also redshirted as a receiver this year is Lloyd Jones, California prep and WAC high hurdle champion, at 6-3, 175, — "maybe the best receiver ever at BYU."

Having lost ground depth to either the pros by graduation or to LDS missions, "the offensive line will again be a real problem," Edwards said. "But, our offensive line coach Dave Kragthorpe has been faced with problems before, and he seems to be a magician at packing the front line."

Attention, Playboy magazine editors: your article which posted a 7-5 season for the Cougars, pointing out BYU needs to strengthen front line play or suffer the consequences, drew an Edwards' retaliation. "We probably don't have many people in Provo who subscribe to Playboy anyway. — That's in a nutshell. A pretty, large nutshell."

Durrant, Roberts combine to spearhead Utah victory

Devin Durrant and Fred Roberts, two of BYU's three 1978 star prep-basketball recruits, scored 66 points between them in spearheading the Utah prep All-Star squad to a victory over Arizona's All-Star squad, 110-100, Friday.

Although he sat out the second period, Durrant tallied the game high of 40 points, connecting on 15-of-27 field goals and taking 12 rebounds. Roberts scored 26 points and an 11-of-19 field goal performance, with 12 rebounds.

The two future Cougar teammates combined for 40 of Utah's 57 second-half points.

"The most important thing to me was that they played well together," BYU's assistant basketball coach John McMullen said. "Many of their points resulted from passing one to another."

"They're both great players individually, but even greater when they play together. They'll be a great addition to the basketball team this fall."

BYU recruits have made strong contributions in the two previous games of the Utah-Arizona All-Star classic. In 1976, Scott Runia and Greg Anderson were featured in Utah's 118-114 double overtime victory and last summer Greg Ballif and Kevin Nielsen starred in a 111-83 Utah win.

BYU Gridders
Six BYU football prep recruits paced the Utah grid stars to a 14-7 victory over their Arizona counterparts Saturday.

Provo's Kyle Whittingham helped set the scene for Utah's second touchdown in the third quarter. He contributed to the two-point winning 70-yard drive by alternately carrying the ball with David Holbrook of Salt Lake City, a University of Utah recruit.

The defensive line game was keyed by 6-4, 225 tackle Mike Morgan, who forced two fumbles. Other BYU recruits who contributed to the defensive game were back Kevin Walker and linemen Nathan Ricks and Dave Neff.

Jay Sample, a 6-4, 225 offensive tackle, drew praise for key blocks thrown in the game.

Clampett scores tournament win

LEWISTON, N.Y. (AP) — BYU's sophomore golf sensation, Bobby Clampett, has become the youngest-ever winner of the Porter Amateur Golf Tournament, finishing with the second-best score ever.

The Carmel, Calif., youth wound up the 1978 tournament Saturday with an 8-under-par 272, beating his nearest competitor, Jay Siegel, by two strokes. The victory gave Clampett five successes in the last six tournaments he has entered.

Clampett's winning score has been topped in tournament history only by Ward Wetlaufer, who shot a 12-under-par 268 in 1965.

The champion's route to his triumph was unusual. After shooting a 5-over-par 75 Wednesday, Clampett shot a course and tournament record 62 Thursday. Marking an even-par 70 on Friday, he carded a 65 in the final round on Saturday.

Vance Heafner, the defending champion, who posted a final round 66 for a 275 total, said of the new champion, "He's proven he's probably the best amateur in the country this year. And the way he's going he'll probably be the best for a few years to come."

Last weekend, Clampett made amateur golf history, by becoming the youngest golfer to score a victory in the 70th annual Western Amateur Open Golf Championship. After winning the Western Junior Open earlier in the year, Clampett became the first player to win both tournaments in the same year.

PTA warns TV networks to improve programming

CHICAGO (AP) — The National PTA is threatening to challenge the license renewals of five network-owned television stations if the networks continue to ignore pleas to improve the quality of programming.

Grace Baisinger, PTA president, said Thursday the networks haven't improved program quality since the PTA's first ratings last fall. She said the organizations will survey TV again this fall and, based on findings, may challenge license renewals for three stations in Chicago, one in Detroit and one in Cleveland.

The Chicago stations are WMAQ-TV, NBC; WLS-TV, ABC; and WBBM-TV, CBS. The others are NBC's WXYZ-TV in Cleveland and Detroit's WXYZ-TV, an ABC affiliate.

She said the PTA's report card was based on the degree of sex and violence, offensive language, artistic merit and the stereotyping of women, minorities, ethnic and age groups.

The PTA, on the same day that television's Emmy Award nominees were announced, listed CBS's "Kojak" on its "most violent" and "most offensive" program lists as well as on its list of having "least overall quality." It was the only show so rated.

"Kojak" has been cancelled for next season. So have most of the shows mentioned on the PTA list of poor programming.

"Maude" was listed among the poorest in overall quality the same day the show's star, Beatrice Arthur, was nominated for the Emmy as best actress on a comedy show.

The PTA gave top overall quality ratings to 10 shows. They were, in order, ABC's "Donny and Marie," CBS' "60 Minutes," CBS' "Grizly Adams," CBS' "Waltons," NBC's "Little House on the Prairie," ABC's "Young Pioneers," ABC's Julie Farr, M.D., NBC's "World of Disney," ABC's "Happy Days," and ABC's "Eight is Enough."

The 10 shows considered poorest in overall quality included NBC's "Chuck Bartle," ABC's "Rah Show," CBS' "Ted Knight," NBC's "Roller Girls," NBC's "Joe and Valerie," ABC's "Sugar Time," CBS's "Husbands, Wives and Lovers," and NBC's "AHS Hudson Street."

The national PTA surveyed 3,000 of its members last April as a basis for rating the shows. ABC and NBC network executives had no immediate comment on the lists. CBS vice president Gene Mater said he had not seen the latest PTA study, but said that last year's PTA ratings were "unscientific and subjective."

The head of a privately-funded group that monitors the quality of children's television criticized the PTA study as useless.

"We feel a lot of programming on the overall quality list is very simplistically sweet," said Peggy Charran, president of Action for Children's Television of Newtonville, Mass. "A list like this doesn't really serve much of a purpose. Someone else's most offensive program might be my favorite."

Y theatrical schedule announced for '78-'79 season performances

What do two star-crossed lovers, a medieval astronomer, a blind mute and a wooden boy have in common?

They are some of the characters that will take the Pardee stage during the BYU Theater and Cinematic Arts 1978-79 performance season.

The first play of the season, "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial" by Herman Wouk, directed by Emmy-award winner Tad Danielewski, will open Sept. 7.

Danielewski has cast BYU theater faculty members in the leading roles with students filling the supporting roles. "I'm very excited about it," said the Polish-born director. "It will be marvelous."

The play deals with the trial of the first officer of a British ship who aided other officers and crewmen to take control of the ship from their sadistic captain.

Barrie Stavits, playwright and lecturer, will speak on campus during the run of his play, "Lamp at Midnight." A Broadway guest director, yet to be announced, will direct George Bernard Shaw's drama "St. Joan."

Other productions this year will include "The Miracle Worker" which will be directed by Harold Oaks. An original production of "Pinocchio" will be directed by its playwright, Max Gledhill. Dr. Charles Whitman will direct Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet." Dr. Preston Gledhill will direct "My Fair Lady" in cooperation with the music department on the de Jong Concert Hall stage.

The Mormon plays, producing "Bye, Bye, Birdie," "Kiss Me Kate" and "Where's Charlie" during Education Week in the Pardee drama theater, will perform the Rodgers and Hammerstein favorite, "Carousel," and "The Comedy of Errors" by Shakespeare during the next Spring and Summer season.

Season tickets and information can be obtained at the BYU Theater Ticket Office located in the HFAC or by calling 375-5050.

Hale romance plays

A Ruth and Nathan Hale play, "I Came to Your Wedding," is being presented during the month of August at the Valley Centre Theatre.

The play is about a fickle-minded Darren Call played by Jeanne Pearce. She is marrying a wealthy Mr. McIntire, played by Alan Bylund, while trying to forget her old boyfriend, Johnny Hardy, played by Jeff Peterson. Adding to the fun are the antics of Darren's mother, played by Claudine Booth, and Nancy Barton, an attractive 35-year-old spinster who has an answer for everything. Diantha Nuckells takes this part.

The performances are at 8 p.m. on Mondays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays until Sept. 9 at 80 N. 300 West.

Y got national 'celebrity,' 'outstanding' Provo student

By PAM TAYLOR
Universe Staff Writer

Just as inevitable as the coming of fall and the beginning of a new school year is the arrival of more than 4,000 freshmen to BYU. Each year the new class has its "Johnny Whitakers," "Danny Ainges" and a host of other celebrities.

This year is no exception. Seventeen-year-old Rebecca Price, the Outstanding Home Economics Student in the nation, will be entering BYU in the fall.

As the national winner, Rebecca said she was awarded a plaque and a $25,000 scholarship from the American Home Economics Association. Coed and Forecast magazines, Simplicity, Campbell Soup and Clairol, drew participants from the states of the United States, Rebecca said.

"I had heard about the contest a year before from the girl who won. She told me to apply so I decided to try out," Rebecca said.

"I couldn't believe it when I won. It was a real honor."

"Going to the AHEA Convention was the best part about being the winner," Rebecca explained. "It was exciting to meet all kinds of people involved in home economics and to see all the different facets you can go into," she said.

Rebecca said she is excited to enter BYU to continue her education in home economics even though she admitted being a little scared. "It's so much different from high school. There are so Rebecca said her family is happy about her accomplishments and glad she is going to BYU. Rebecca is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alvin Price of Provo.
